There are many superlatives to describe Albion House, a unique property with many period features throughout its three floors and believed to date from 1750. The front exterior of the property is Bath Stone, the sides Cotswold stone all nestling under a slate roof. The accommodation throughout is substantial, very niche and best described as shabby chic which compliments the property, its heritage and period charm. The ground floor has two bay windows to the front and one of the two front rooms are substantial, the entrance reception having flag stone flooring and both having feature fireplaces. The cosy rear sitting room with a working fire opens to the large kitchen with exposed Bath stone walls and open plan to the dining area which in turn leads to the large living room with exposed stone walls, exposed beams and French doors to the garden. Off the kitchen are stairs to the substantial landing with two bedrooms and a further landing area off. The master bedroom has built in wardrobes with exposed A frame timber beams and en suite facilities and exposed floor boards throughout this floor. The bathroom is situated to the front of the property with two further bedrooms either side, both of which have period stone fireplaces. Also off the main landing are stairs rising to the loft room with two further bedrooms, a smaller one with beds cleverly built into the eaves and a much larger bedroom with exposed A frame beams and storage space. These bedrooms are either side of a landing which could easily be utilised as a study area showing the properties versatility. Albion House is warmed by a mains gas fired central heating system. Externally there is a large garden laid to patio and lawn, large shed to the side, two stone storage rooms attached to the body of the house and a third with wood burning stove which was used as a workshop by the current owner. Subject to planning this could become a granny annex. Albion House has over 3500sq ft of internal floor space.
