First Impressions

This stone fronted Victorian home is perfect if you want a character property without comprising on practicality. With high ceilings and uber spacious rooms there's a great amount of space on offer, and a variety of original features give a nod to the property's history.

The Living Space

You're welcomed into the home through a traditional entrance vestibule with period tiled flooring underfoot and an etched-glass feature window overhead, quirky and unique touches which add a splash of colour, and give the first glimpse of the fun and vibrant interiors.

A traditional hallway and vintage doors connect the downstairs living spaces and add to the charm of the property. The front reception room offers itself as one of two lounge areas, with huge windows pouring in streams of natural light that create a bright and airy feel, a chimney breast with fireplace and gas fire is in keeping with the traditional layout, and an original hardwood floor continues the period style.

Back into the hallway and further to the rear, the hardwood flooring continues in another substantial reception room with traditional chimney breast, and provides a great living area, with ample space for dining too. This second reception is also fresh, bright and airy owing to the two windows, and the rear window affords scenic views toward Holcombe Hill and Peel Tower.

From this second reception room is access into the kitchen, with integrated appliances including an oven and hob with extractor, and a handy pantry and utility room. The exposed stone floor is another quirky period feature and fits perfectly with the unique interior design of the home.

The rear living spaces here also provide an opportunity for reconfiguration to create that desirable modern open plan lifestyle that so many are attracted to, where the kitchen, dining and social areas come together as one.

Bedrooms & Bathrooms

Situated across the first and second floor are four double bedrooms which are all superb sizes! The master is the largest of the four and situated to the front on the first floor, benefitting from a huge footprint and plentiful storage via the large fitted wardrobes. More fitted wardrobes are found in the second bedroom, and each of the other four bedrooms provide more than enough space for family life, with the two bedrooms on the second floor having vaulted ceilings. And all this space perhaps provides an option for a home office or hobby room if all the bedrooms are not required .

The second floor shines tons of natural light onto both landings which continues the fresh feel throughout, and it's no surprise the family bathroom is a great size too, with tiled walls and floor, and a four piece suite comprising a freestanding tub, walk-in shower with glass façade, pedestal wash basin and WC.

Owing to the amazing amount of space within this property and its bedrooms, there is certainly scope to install an en-suite to the master if desired, in addition to a downstairs WC as well.

The Outside Space

In addition to the back yard area which looks over toward Holcombe Hill, the property has a sizeable assigned parcel of land at the front which provides plenty of outside space, with enough to accommodate a private drive, outdoor seating/garden area, and a detached garage.
