OWNER'S COMMENTS

"Little Jug" has been our family home since 1985, and we have enjoyed every minute living here. We bought it particularly for the garden which has been a delight over the years. The pond eventually found its right place after we abandoned 2 others, the trees have matured and the fruit crops well: rhubarb, blackcurrant, redcurrant, plum, eating apple, cooking apple and pear. It is a garden which we have loved sharing with others: opening for the garden trails, inviting folks around for drinks or supper and when everyone has left enjoying the last rays of the western sun with a nightcap.

The house is quirky and small, that cannot be denied, but it is welcoming, cosy and the addition of the kitchen extension has brought it up to modern standards. It has quite a history and we have had visitors from Australia (I'm still in touch with them) who had ancestors living here who migrated after World War II as Ten Pound Poms. Also, a lady from Wales who as a child spent her summer holidays here. It was great to hear the stories and how the place has changed over the years. Some of the benefits of living in an older property!
