A Period Cottage with Real Character

Tucked away in a quiet part of St Leonards, this period cottage is a really interesting little house, with plenty of character and a good deal more personality than most. It is set in a discreet location, but still within reach of local shops, schools, parks and Warrior Square station.

This is not a house that has been modernised to within an inch of its life, and that is very much part of its appeal. It has clearly been lived in and cared for over a long period of time, and there is a warmth and individuality here that is quite hard to create artificially.

One of the main features is the handmade timber kitchen, which has been built with real care and suits the house extremely well. It gives the property a
