This home has been genuinely thought through, extended and arranged in a way that just works for modern family life. The real heart of it is the open-plan kitchen, dining and family space at the back. It's a great space, filled with natural light thanks to the bi-fold doors that open straight onto the garden. Whether it's busy mornings, relaxed evenings or having people over, this is where everything comes together. A separate utility room keeps things practical, and the addition of a dedicated home office is a huge bonus.

At the front of the house, there's a comfortable reception room with a bay window and feature fireplace, perfect when you want a bit of quiet away from the main living space.

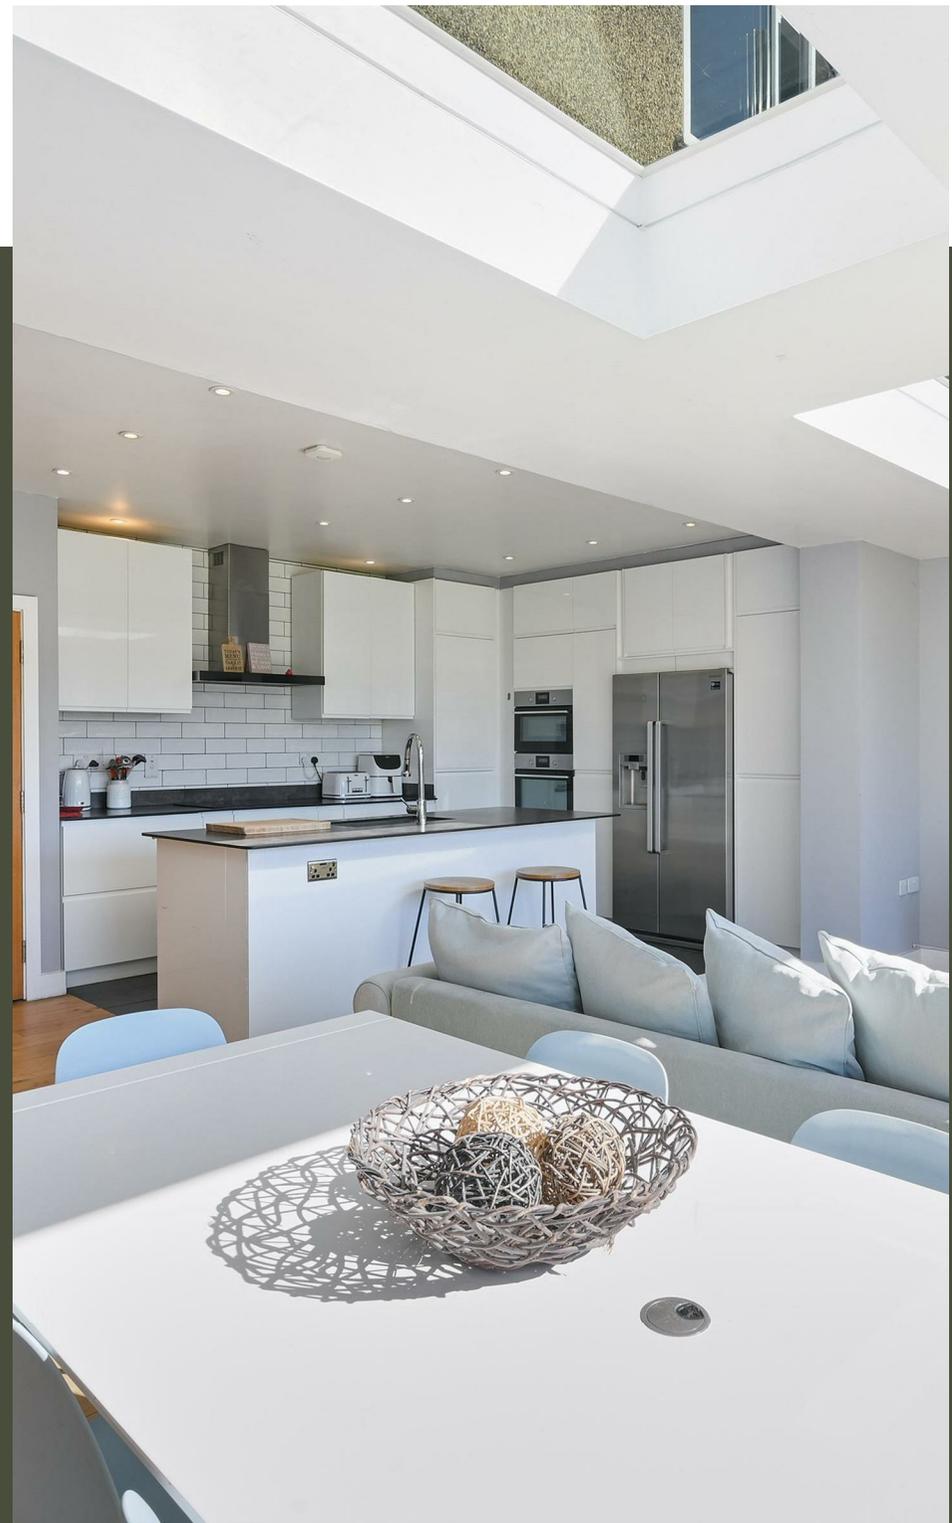

Upstairs, everything continues to feel well balanced. Two of the bedrooms have their own en-suites, which is ideal for older children or guests, while the rest are served by a smart family bathroom. The rooms are all good sizes, with no awkward compromises.

Overall, it's a home that's been extended with real purpose, adding space exactly where you need it.
