This home truly represents a unique opportunity to enjoy the best of Brighton living.

Location

Vernon Terrace was built in the 1850s, it has a late Regency/Italianate style with numbers one to six being the oldest in the terrace, they are Grade II Listed buildings due to their architectural and historical importance and are located within the Montpelier and Clifton Hill conservation area.

This popular Seven Dials location offers easy access to Brighton mainline train station (approximately half a mile in distance) and city centre which is why it is extremely desirable especially to those who commute to London. The location also offers additional bus and transport links across the city and the Sussex area. Numerous bars, eateries and amenities are found at the end of the street, the seafront and Western Road are also situated only a short distance to the south. St Ann's Well Gardens is 0.3 miles in distance, which is a popular open green space that has tennis courts and the Open air theatre in Dyke Road Park is also nearby. A plethora of well regarded schools and colleges serve the area, including BHASVIC, Cardinal Newman, Brunswick and Stanford school.
