There are properties that feel right from the moment you arrive. This is one of them.

A converted barn in a genuinely private setting, about half a mile from the village, close enough to walk for essentials, far enough to feel entirely on your own. The gardens wrap around the house with the kind of established planting that takes decades to achieve: mature shrubs, sweeping lawns, specimen trees, an ornamental pond, and greenhouse for anyone who takes their growing seriously.

The house itself has been thoughtfully done. Original character, exposed timbers, vaulted ceilings, the proportions that only old agricultural buildings carry, sits alongside proper modern comfort. The sitting room runs the full depth of the plan, with wide French windows opening directly to the garden. The property boasts panoramic southerly aspect views over farmland to the stunning Vale of Clwyd, the kind you stop for rather than take for granted.

The kitchen/breakfast room & family room are at the heart of the house, log burner, high vaulted ceiling, French windows to the garden, and enough space to feel genuinely sociable without being overwhelming. The dining room and entrance hall with galleried landing complete the ground floor. Upstairs, three well-proportioned bedrooms and a beautiful bathroom.

The studio, recently built to a high specification is fully lined and insulated, sits in a secluded garden away from the house with its own kitchen and shower room, and a deck that makes the most of those southerly views. It is currently used as a home office/studio, but with relevant permissions could be used as an independent living space for family/guests. For anyone whose children visit from a distance, that matters more than it might sound.

A double garage, workshop and store complete the practical picture.

This is a home for someone entering a chapter that deserves to be lived well — where the morning starts with a garden worth walking in, and the evening ends beside a fire worth lighting.
