A warm and inviting property situated in this conveniently central location, the building was originally a small neighbourhood brew pub called The Coopers Arms in 1849. What was once the stables of the establishment has now been converted into a fully furnished self contained, one bedroom house. The property is accessed via a cobbled archway into the courtyard, and benefits from a small garden and conservatory entrance. To the lower level is the master bedroom with fitted sliding wardrobes, a useful study area, and utility cupboard with washing machine. To the upper level is the open-plan kitchen/living room with breakfast bar, fitted white goods and other appliances.
