Ferwig (Welsh: Verwig) is a small rural village and community situated in Ceredigion, on the west coast of Wales, approximately 2 miles southwest of Cardigan. Nestled between rolling farmland and the scenic Cardigan Bay coastline, Ferwig offers a peaceful setting typical of rural west Wales.

The community includes several dispersed settlements and farms, with easy access to Poppit Sands, Mwnt Beach, and the Ceredigion Coast Path, making it popular for walkers and nature enthusiasts. The area features traditional Welsh cottages, working farmland, and panoramic sea views.

Ferwig lies within a region rich in history and culture — close to Cardigan Castle and the Teifi Estuary, where the River Teifi meets the sea. It retains a strong sense of local identity and community, with Welsh commonly spoken.

Transport links are provided via nearby Cardigan, which offers shops, schools, and services, while the surrounding countryside supports agriculture and tourism.
