About The Property

Looking for a detached bungalow with wide views, a mature garden and a practical layout? This three-bedroom home in Rhos, Llandysul offers space, comfort, and a solid setting near Cardigan Bay and the rolling hills of West Wales.

Set in the rural village of Rhos, Llandysul, this detached three-bedroom bungalow brings together practicality, generous proportions, and a setting that takes full advantage of West Wales’ natural landscape. The house sits on a well-shaped plot with a spacious driveway to the front and a garden that’s been clearly looked after over the years. With views across open countryside.

The layout works. A canopy porch opens into the central hall, with rooms flowing off from both sides. There’s a cloakroom and WC near the entrance – useful for day-to-day living – and then further down the hallway, everything opens up into the heart of the home. The living room/dining room looks out to the rear and the views beyond through wide double-glazed windows and a sliding door. Light makes its way in steadily, and the feature fireplace with its slate hearth gives the room a solid focal point. This space feels calm, with wall lights adding some softness in the evenings and plenty of room for seating and a dining table

The kitchen is also accessed from the hallway and has been fitted with a range of cupboards, drawers, and built-in appliances, and the sink is placed below a rear-facing window overlooking the countryside views beyond. Further along is the utility room, fitted with its own range of units, another sink, and space for both a washing machine and dryer. The Worcester oil-fired boiler is also tucked in here, alongside extra storage, helping to keep the rest of the house free from clutter. There is also a back door leading you out to the rear garden.

There are three bedrooms in total. The main bedroom is at the front and has its own built-in wardrobes and a practical en-suite with a walk-in shower, vanity unit, and even a bidet. The two further bedrooms are both comfortable in size, with the second offering a good amount of fitted furniture, including wardrobes, bedside cabinets, and a dressing table.

The main bathroom has been fitted with a four-piece suite, including a separate walk-in shower and a full-sized bath. Fully tiled with a simple, neutral finish, it offers everything that’s needed for everyday use.

Externally, there’s an integral garage/workshop which can be accessed from the bungalow hallway, with an electric roller door and its own staircase up to a loft storage area. This adds another layer of usefulness to the property – ideal for hobbies, workshop space or just extra storage. The driveway to the front provides easy access for multiple cars and space to turn, while the garden itself is laid out in a straightforward and manageable way. The front has a lawn with mature shrubs and bushes, while the rear garden stretches out behind the house. There’s a very useful timber summerhouse or additional workshop, some smaller garden sheds and a further lawn, more mature planting, and open countryside views that are uninterrupted by buildings – a real plus.

This home offers that balance between rural setting and day-to-day practicality. The layout is sensible, the fittings are solid and functional, and the surroundings speak for themselves. It's the kind of place that's clearly been cared for and now offers a straightforward opportunity to modernise and place their own stamp on the home for someone looking to settle in this part of West Wales.

Only a short drive away, Cardigan Bay offers access to coastal walks, wildlife, and smaller towns dotted along the shoreline. Llandysul, with its local shops, schools, and community connections, gives the village of Rhos a broader support network without spoiling the pace of life that makes the area so appealing.
