About The Property

Looking for a four-bedroom bungalow with sea glimpses, garden space and a flexible layout? This home on the edge of St Dogmaels combines the outlook of Cardigan Bay with the practicality of single-storey living and easy access to West Wales' coastal and town links.

Set towards the end of a cul-de-sac in the popular village of St Dogmaels, this four-bedroom bungalow offers a practical layout, plenty of natural light and a location that gives easy access to both countryside and coast. Perched at the top of the village, the position offers a wider outlook than most, with sea glimpses over the fields towards Cardigan Bay and the rolling patchwork of West Wales countryside.

From the front, the house is approached via a driveway with space for several vehicles, and the garden wraps around all four sides. Different spots around the property pick up the best of the sun across the day, and the boundaries are defined by hedges and mature planting, giving a good level of privacy without feeling boxed in. There's a blend of lawn, patio and practical hardstanding areas, meaning the outside space works well without demanding too much upkeep.

Inside, the layout is straightforward and functional. The lounge sits at the front, with a wide bay window making the most of the views across the fields and out towards the water beyond. It's a space that's calm and neutral, with enough depth for a comfortable furniture arrangement and a gas-effect fire giving a central point of focus. The feeling here is one of simplicity and space, with light pulling through from the front.

Towards the rear of the bungalow, the kitchen and dining area form a sociable part of the house. There's a practical range of matching wall and base units, a one and a half sink looking out to the garden, and cooking appliances including an electric hob and built-in oven with grill. Patio doors lead out directly to the rear garden, which adds a natural flow for everyday use or when hosting.

A utility room links off the kitchen, with a side door out and space for freestanding appliances – keeping the kitchen clearer for day-to-day tasks.

All four bedrooms are found off the central hallway and are well-sized, making the layout suitable for those needing a bit of extra space – whether for family, guests or hobbies. The main bathroom is fitted with a freestanding bath and a separate electric shower, plus W/C and basin. The central hallway also offers a useful airing cupboard where the boiler is located and extra storage can be kept tucked away.

Externally:

There's a balance to the house that suits those looking for single-storey living with a bit more breathing space, both inside and out. Nothing feels overdone or overly modern, but the essentials are solid, and there's room to shape things to suit individual taste over time.

Location-wise, the setting works well for anyone wanting to stay well connected while still getting the benefit of West Wales' coastal feel. Cardigan is just a short drive away with its shops, cafes, and amenities, while several beaches are within easy reach. St Dogmaels itself has long been a sought-after village for its mix of community, coastline and countryside.

Overall, this is a property that brings together space, practicality and setting. It's not trying too hard, and that's part of the appeal – with the views over Cardigan Bay and the flexibility of the plot adding to the longer-term value.
