About The Property

Set within the impressive Coedmor Mansion complex in Llangoedmor, this Grade II listed mid-terrace home built in 1830 forms part of a thoughtfully converted building dating back to its redevelopment in the late 1980s. One of just ten properties within the development, it offers an interesting balance between individual ownership and shared enjoyment of the surrounding grounds, all held on a freehold basis.

The approach immediately sets the tone, with the attractive stone façade, arched architectural detailing and a sense of history that gives the property a distinct identity compared to more typical homes in the area. The addition of a separate garage within a nearby block is a practical advantage, particularly given the setting.

Entry leads directly into the main living space, a striking open plan kitchen and living area with impressive ceiling height that enhances the overall sense of space. The room works well as a central hub, combining everyday living with dining and cooking in one place. The kitchen itself is fitted with a range of units and wooden worktops, with space for appliances and a layout that makes good use of the available footprint.

The living area is particularly notable, with exposed stonework around the arched window and door creating a strong focal point. A wood-burning stove adds both character and functionality, making this a comfortable space throughout the year. The proportions of the room allow for flexible furniture arrangements, with space for seating and a dining table without feeling cramped.

Stairs lead up to the first floor, where the layout continues to make practical use of the available space.

There are two bedrooms, including a well-proportioned main bedroom and a second room that works well as a guest room, study or occasional bedroom. Both benefit from natural light and retain a simple, clean finish.

The bathroom has been updated with a modern suite, including a walk-in shower, wash hand basin and WC, offering a fresh contrast to the more traditional elements found elsewhere in the property.

Outside, the shared grounds are a real advantage. Maintained collectively by the residents, they provide open green space and a sense of separation from neighbouring properties that is often hard to find with terraced homes. The wider setting around Coedmor Mansion adds to the overall appeal, with mature trees and a more rural feel while still being within easy reach of Cardigan town.

Llangoedmor itself is a well-regarded village just a short distance from Cardigan, offering a good balance between countryside surroundings and access to everyday amenities.

Cardigan provides a range of shops, cafés, schools and services, while the coastline of Cardigan Bay is only a short drive away, making it easy to enjoy beaches, coastal walks and everything that West Wales is known for.

This is a property that will appeal to those looking for something a little different. The combination of historic character, manageable accommodation and shared outdoor space makes it a solid option for a main home, second home or investment.

Viewings are recommended to appreciate how the space works in practice and the setting within the wider Coedmor Mansion grounds.
