About The Property

Set in the rolling countryside of West Wales, with Cardigan Bay within reach, this 5/6 bedroom smallholding offers space, flexibility, and land — all in one place. The house sits in around 2.5 acres, made up of garden areas and a gently sloping field that offers good grazing potential for a pony, livestock, or just extra outdoor space.

The layout suits a range of living arrangements. As a whole, it works well as a family home with space for children, guests, hobbies and more. Alternatively, a door can be closed to create a self-contained section with its own sitting room, utility, bathroom and conservatory, making it ideal for an extended family or as a potential annexe setup.

Entry is via a brick-paved forecourt with access to the house from here, a hall area provides useful space currently set up as an office. This connects to the main lounge, which has a warm and rustic feel with painted beams, a wood-burning stove, and a painted stone chimney breast. Wooden floors and stair access to the first floor add character, and a door links directly to the spacious kitchen.

The kitchen/diner stretches over 26 feet and has been designed with function and space in mind. There's a mix of oak worktops, base and wall units, and several cooking options including an oil-fired AGA, LPG range cooker and a built-in eye-level steam oven. Tiled flooring helps keep the space practical, and there's more than enough room for a full-size dining table. It's a sociable spot with easy access to the rear porch and outdoor areas.

Continued :

Upstairs, the T-shaped landing leads to four bedrooms, a bathroom and a walk-in wardrobe which could be used as a small study. Three of the bedrooms have built-in wardrobes and shelving. Bedroom one and bedroom three are doubles, while bedroom two and four are well-sized singles. Each has a different outlook, with some looking over the garden and others taking in the surrounding countryside.

The bathroom includes a bath with a shower over, WC, and a vanity unit with sink, along with a useful airing cupboard for storage. Wooden wall panelling on the landing and in some bedrooms gives a natural finish to the upstairs space.

Back downstairs and across the hall, the inner section of the house offers an entirely separate feel. An inner hallway leads to a coat room and the main living room – a generous space, fitted with two Velux roof windows. From here, glazed doors open into the conservatory, which is another well-sized room and gives access straight onto the garden decking area.

Off the inner hallway is a second bathroom with a jacuzzi-style bath, separate shower, WC and sink. The spacious utility room is also accessed here (it is the size of an average kitchen) – fitted with base and wall units, a one-and-a-half bowl sink, and plumbing for a washing machine. It's a well-designed workspace with storage, perfect for daily use.

The flexibility of the internal layout is a real strength of this property. Whether used as one home or reconfigured to allow for semi-independent living, it adapts easily. It offers possibilities for growing families, those with dependent relatives, or anyone needing space to work from home.

Externally
Outside, the garden has been cared for and planned with colour and planting variety in mind. There are established shrubs and flower beds, pathways, and seating areas, including the deck leading from the conservatory. The garden feels established but manageable, with clear separation from the adjoining field.

The field itself is just over 2 acres, is open and gently sloping, bordered by fencing and hedgerows. It provides excellent grazing or recreational space, ideal for those interested in keeping animals or simply enjoying the outdoors. Together with the garden, it brings the total plot to about 2.5 acres.

The brick-paved forecourt in front of the house gives plenty of parking and leads to a detached garage that is currently configured as a shed – the owners changed the garage doors to seal them off. The mechanism for an overhead door is still in place, so it could be changed back easily should the new owners wish to do so, as it is blocked off by uPvc sheeting. There is a separate workshop/wood store. Both offer solid space for storage, tools, or hobbies, with the potential to adapt further if required.

Throughout the property, a mix of features gives it personality – from the wooden floors and beams to the mixture of traditional fittings and practical upgrades. Double glazing is in place where needed, and oil-fired central heating supports the main house.

The surrounding area is known for its scenic landscapes and strong community feel. Access to Cardigan Bay is straightforward, with several beaches and coastal paths within reach. Local towns provide day-to-day shopping and services, and there's good access to primary and secondary schools in the wider region. West Wales combines rural life with practicality, and this property offers a strong balance of both.

For anyone looking in the West Wales and Cardigan Bay area for a well-proportioned home with land, flexible living space and scope to adapt, this one is well worth viewing.
