About The Property

Looking for a historic Grade II listed country house with land, original mill heritage and a striking thatched outbuilding dating back to the 1700s? This character-filled West Wales property near Newcastle Emlyn includes around 5 acres of woodland, gardens and an orchard, a former weaving shed workshop, and a beautifully preserved stone house rich with period features.

This unique Grade II listed country house offers a rare opportunity to acquire a property with genuine historical significance, generous land and a collection of character outbuildings, all set in a rural setting just outside the hamlet of Cwmpengraig in West Wales. With around five acres in total, including woodland rising behind the house and orchard across the road, the property provides an appealing mix of heritage, lifestyle potential and practical working space.

The history of the property is closely tied to the local wool industry. Dating back to the 1700s, the site was formerly owned by mill operators Benjamin and Eleanor Jones who ran a weaving operation here. The family grew and dyed wool on site before weaving and taking finished cloth to market. A water mill once operated nearby before being destroyed by fire in 1926, and the property remained within the same family until around the year 2000. Today, many original elements still remain, giving the house a strong sense of its past.

The main house itself is deceptively spacious, offering 3 bedrooms and an office/child's room, two reception rooms and a kitchen dining room arranged across two floors. Period details are evident throughout, including exposed beams, original fireplaces, sash windows and stone features that reflect the building's long history.

One of the most distinctive rooms in the house is the weavers' sitting room, formerly used as the weavers' living area. Here, a striking inglenook fireplace forms the focal point, complete with wood burning stove, original bread oven and bible cupboard. Painted beams run across the ceiling and the sash window looks out across the paddock land opposite. A staircase rises from this room to the first floor, and doors lead through to the kitchen and cloakroom.

The cloakroom is fitted with WC and wash hand basin and also houses the oil fired boiler.

The kitchen dining room is fitted with a range of wall and base units with work surfaces over, a single drainer sink unit and plumbing for appliances. An oil fired Aga provides cooking facilities, and slate flagstone flooring adds further character to the space. A sash window looks out to the front and a door links back to the sitting room.

On the opposite side of the house, the former mill owner's quarters provide a grand entrance. The entrance hallway leads through to the living room where a wood burning stove sits within an exposed stone fireplace. Quarry tiled flooring and a sash window to the front maintain the traditional feel of the property while offering a comfortable everyday living space.

Upstairs, the accommodation is arranged around two staircases reflecting the original layout of the house.

From the first staircase (from the weavers sitting room), a landing leads to the third bedroom which overlooks the paddock land opposite and includes built in wardrobes. The family bathroom is also located here and is fitted with a bath with shower over, WC and wash hand basin.

The second staircase leads to a separate landing serving two further bedrooms and an office/child's room.

Bedroom two, part of the former mill owner's quarters, includes an original feature fireplace and sash window looking across the paddock. Bedroom one also enjoys views across the land and retains its own original fireplace and fitted wardrobes.

The fourth room, currently used as a home office, could be a child's bedroom, also faces the front and provides a flexible additional room suitable for work, study or guest accommodation.

Outbuildings and Workshops

One of the most distinctive features of the property is Fflatri Yr Ogof, a remarkable Grade II listed outbuilding dating back to approximately 1770.

With its eye-catching thatched roof and stone construction, the building once apparently formed two separate cottages but is now used as workshops and studio space. The character of the building is evident throughout with vaulted ceilings, exposed beams and stone walls.

Workshop one and workshop two both benefit from power, lighting and electric heating, making them suitable for a variety of uses, including crafts, studio space or small-scale business activity. Water is also connected to one of the workshops.

The Grounds

To the side of the house lies a well-established garden with a number of useful features for anyone interested in growing produce or keeping animals.

There is a greenhouse, vegetable growing area, fruit trees and practical outbuildings including a pig shed and two chicken coops. Seating areas allow space to enjoy the surroundings, while the setting is enclosed by mature planting and traditional stone walls.

Three separate driveway areas provide parking for several vehicles.

The Land

Behind the house the woodland rises up the hillside, providing a natural backdrop and is about three and a half

Across the road, a wooden bridge crosses a small stream and leads to a level paddock of about one acre. This area has been carefully maintained and would suit a range of activities such as growing produce or planting further orchard trees.

Also located on this side of the road are the remains of the original mill structure, where a partly stone-built workshop now stands, along with a greenhouse and additional access providing further parking space. The rest of the gardens total to about half an acre, totalling the whole grounds to about five acres.

Properties with this combination of historic interest, land and original outbuildings rarely become available. With its weaving heritage, Grade II listed buildings and growing potential, this is a property with genuine character and many possibilities for future use.

Early viewing is recommended to fully appreciate the history, setting and versatility that this distinctive West Wales property offers.
