About The Property

This individually designed 1960s bungalow set in just over 2 acres right in the heart of Cardigan offers a rare combination of style, setting and scope. Tucked away behind its own private driveway in the centre of Cardigan, this 1960s architect-designed bungalow sits within grounds measuring just over two acres. Designed with a distinctive retro style that carries through both the layout and the finishes, the property offers something that's rarely found – space, character and seclusion, right in town.

Approached through a private entrance off the main road, the drive opens out to a generous parking area with a carport that comfortably takes over six vehicles. The layout of the home is thoughtfully considered, with the main entrance leading into a wide hallway. Off to one side is the kitchen diner and to the other, the main lounge.

The lounge is open plan and features a wall of windows along one side with sliding patio doors, bringing in plenty of natural light and offering garden views. The original design touches have been retained here, including wood-panelled walls and ceilings, and a painted brick wall with a fireplace that provides a focal point. The open layout flows around the back of the fireplace into the dining space, keeping the whole living area connected while still giving each part of the room a defined function.

The kitchen is fitted with a bold red retro suite of base and wall units, a feature that nods back to the property's design roots. There's a one and a half sink with a drainer beneath a part-glazed door that leads out to the rear garden. Appliances include an eye-level electric oven, built-in dishwasher, and space and plumbing for a washing machine. Original wood panelling continues in this room, creating a sense of cohesion throughout the living spaces.

Back off the main hallway, the inner hall gives access to three double bedrooms, each well-sized and comfortably arranged. There's no shortage of built-in storage here either, with cupboards already in place along the corridor.

A separate WC includes a toilet, sink and roof light, while the adjacent shower room is set up as a wet room with an additional sink. The layout keeps all the bedrooms and washing facilities together, giving the home a practical and functional flow.

Outside, the property sits within gardens that run around all sides of the house. To the front, a paved patio area looks over the paddock – ideal for sitting out or entertaining. The section of garden behind and to the side is lawn, while the paddock to the front is dotted with a few feature trees that add structure without crowding the space. There's a real sense of openness here, with uninterrupted lines between the house, garden and field beyond.

Despite its scale and setting, the home sits quietly within central Cardigan, meaning access to shops, schools and transport links are all within walking distance. The land included with the property adds to the appeal – a rarity for a plot of this size in the town centre.

This is a property that has kept its original character while leaving scope for personal touches. The architectural features are already there – from the strong linear layout to the wood finishes and bold kitchen – and the setting offers privacy without feeling remote. Whether kept as it is or updated over time, the home gives a solid foundation for anyone drawn to this period of design or looking for more space in town.
