About The Property

Looking for a substantial detached home with flexible living space, generous parking, excellent garaging and open countryside views, all within easy reach of the coast? This well-presented property on the edge of Blaenporth offers four double bedrooms, three bathrooms, a superb kitchen/diner, multiple reception rooms and a layout that could suit a range of needs in West Wales, with Cardigan Bay beaches close by.

Set at the edge of the rural village of Blaenporth, this impressive detached house offers a great mix of space, practicality and flexibility, with open countryside to the rear and distant sea views adding to its appeal. The setting works particularly well for anyone wanting a village base that still feels connected to the coast, with the beaches and coastal paths of Cardigan Bay within easy reach and all the appeal of West Wales close at hand.

The property makes a strong first impression, approached through wooden gates onto a gravelled driveway with parking for several vehicles, including space for a touring caravan or motorhome if needed. The detached garaging is another real plus, with both a double garage and a separate single garage, each fitted with electric roller doors, giving useful storage, workshop potential or secure parking.

A pillared entrance, with both steps and ramped access, leads to the main front door and into a spacious entrance hall. This is a bright, smart space with tiled flooring, a staircase rising to the first floor and a useful understairs cupboard. From here, doors lead off to the main reception rooms, and there is an immediate sense that the house has been carefully maintained and updated.

The main lounge is a particularly good-sized room, finished in a clean, modern style with plenty of floor space for family seating. A feature fireplace and media centre creates a natural focal point, while patio doors at the rear bring in plenty of light and connect the room directly to the garden.

Alongside this is a further sitting room which links neatly with the kitchen/diner, creating a layout that feels sociable and versatile. It works well as an everyday sitting area, somewhere to relax with a view over the garden, or as additional family space separate from the main lounge. The patio doors here are a strong feature too, giving another garden access point and helping the rear of the house feel bright and open.

The kitchen/diner is one of the standout rooms in the house. Recently fitted, it has a very smart range of matching wall and base units with oak worktops over, giving it a modern finish with warmth and character. There is space for a freestanding range cooker, available by separate negotiation, along with an extractor over, integrated dishwasher, sink with drainer and plenty of room for a freestanding island if required. The dining area sits naturally within the same space, with patio doors opening out to the rear garden and open views beyond. It is easy to see this being the main day-to-day hub of the house, with ample room for cooking, dining and spending time together.

From the kitchen, a door leads through to the utility room, which continues the same fitted style with matching units, additional sink, space and plumbing for a washing machine, and the recently upgraded oil boiler. This room adds useful practicality, but it also strengthens the flexibility of the overall layout, particularly as it connects to a separate shower room and second hallway.

The ground floor shower room has been recently upgraded and is finished to a smart modern standard, with a double shower, vanity wash hand basin and WC. Beyond this, the second hallway has its own front door, giving independent access to this side of the property. A further reception room sits off this hallway and could serve equally well as a sitting room, home office, hobbies room or occasional fifth bedroom, depending on requirements. With patio doors opening to the rear garden, it is a bright and very usable room. This part of the house offers obvious flexibility for multi-generational living or a more independent arrangement if ever needed.

On the first floor, the landing is spacious and includes a useful airing cupboard with shelving. Four double bedrooms lead off from here, and the proportions throughout are very good. Each bedroom has stylish built-in wardrobes, which is a real practical advantage and keeps the rooms feeling uncluttered.

The principal bedroom is particularly well arranged, with fitted storage and its own en-suite shower room. This includes a double shower, modern fittings and an attractive stained glass feature window which gives the room a bit of individual character. The remaining bedrooms are all genuine doubles rather than smaller box rooms, making the house well suited to family use. The two rear bedrooms also enjoy distant sea views, which is a lovely extra and a reminder of how close the coast is from here.

The family bathroom has been recently updated as well, matching the rest of the house in style and presentation, and provides a smart main bathroom to serve the first floor.

Externally:

Outside, the rear garden has been thoughtfully arranged to make the most of the outlook. Gated pathways run down both sides of the house, linking the front driveway with the rear garden and also allowing access to the second entrance door. The garden itself combines patio seating areas with a well-kept lawned section, raised beds and planted borders with a good mix of shrubs and flowers. A raised patio creates another seating area that is particularly well placed for outside dining or simply enjoying the open countryside backdrop, with distant sea views off to the side.

Overall, this is a house that offers more than first expected. It has the feel of a substantial family home, but also the kind of flexibility that broadens its appeal, whether for buyers needing work-from-home space, room for extended family, or simply a property with plenty of options for the future. Combined with the excellent parking, very useful garages, modern presentation and easy access to both the coast and surrounding villages, it is a strong all-rounder in a popular part of West Wales.

For anyone looking for a well-presented detached home with space, flexibility and a great position close to Cardigan Bay, this is one well worth arranging a viewing for.
