About The Property

Looking for a stylish coastal home with classic 1930s features and sea views? This beautifully restored former Sea Captain's house in Aberporth offers character, generous space, and the added bonus of extra land with building potential.

In the heart of the sought-after seaside village of Aberporth sits this thoughtfully restored former Sea Captain's house, dating back to the 1930s and brimming with original character. From parquet flooring and stained-glass windows to fireplaces and decorative details, the home has been carefully brought back to life, combining timeless style with practical everyday living. Just 600 yards from the two sandy beaches, the property holds a prominent position in the village, offering distant sea views from several of the upstairs bedrooms and the chance to enjoy everything Aberporth has to offer right on the doorstep.

The house is currently used as a successful holiday let, but its layout and character make it equally well suited to being a welcoming family home. One of its most unique features is the addition of an extra piece of land to the rear, fenced separately from the main house and offering a wide range of possibilities. With its own access through Brynglas Estate, this space could be used as an extended garden or provide scope for overflow accommodation—whether that be a cabin, shepherd's hut, or chalet or an annex for multi-generational living, or even a separate affordable dwelling, (all subject to the relevant planning permissions). The detached garage and outside WC also sit to the immediate side of this area, adding further versatility.

Access to the property is via steps leading up to a canopied front veranda, which frames the entrance and offers a glimpse of the sea. The small porch opens into a striking entrance hall, a true statement space with original Terrazzo flooring, a bespoke staircase, and generous proportions.

Details Continued:

To one side lies the lounge, full of period charm with its working fireplace, parquet flooring, and bay window that draws in light. Opposite, the dining room mirrors this sense of character with a bow window, parquet flooring, and its own working fireplace, creating a space that can feel both formal and homely.

Under the staircase sits a WC and a cupboard housing the oil-fired boiler. The kitchen, a practical and welcoming room, offers fitted base units with worktops, a solid fuel Rayburn that lends itself to baking, a double sink, and a Belling five-ring electric range. Original built-in cupboards with glass-fronted doors add to the period detail, while parquet flooring continues the theme of quality craftsmanship. From here, a door leads to the utility room, with sink and space for a washing machine. The adjoining pantry provides additional storage with built-in shelving, and a further door opens into the rear hall.

The ground floor bathroom sits just off this rear hall, fitted with a freestanding bath, double shower, WC, and vanity basin.

The staircase rises to a broad landing with exposed wooden floorboards and doors leading to the first-floor rooms. There are three double bedrooms and one single, with three of the doubles benefitting from original fireplaces and bow or bay windows. Each of the double bedrooms also enjoys sea views, highlighting the property's prime location above the village. The family bathroom continues the theme of period elegance, with a freestanding bath, separate shower, WC, and vanity basin, while a separate WC with wash hand basin lies just across the landing. An additional storage cupboard houses the hot water tank.

Externally:

The property is approached via a front driveway with ample parking space, both on the drive and to the rear gravelled area. Steps lead up to the veranda and front lawn, where a mature fruit tree provides a focal point among established hedging. To the rear, the gravelled area links to the detached garage and outside WC, with a gate giving access to the additional land.

The additional land offers scope well beyond a traditional garden. With its own access point, it could lend itself to holiday use such as glamping pods, a shepherd's hut, or a small cabin (subject to consents), creating further income alongside the main house. Equally, it could be developed as a generous garden with space for orchards, vegetable beds, or outdoor entertaining, or even provide scope for multi-generational living with the addition of a separate annexe or an affordable dwelling (again subject to planning).

This house combines classic period character, sea views, generous space, and the valuable addition of extra land—making it a truly special property in one of West Wales's most popular seaside communities.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE AREA:

Aberporth is a thriving village on the Cardigan Bay coast of West Wales, known for its two sandy beaches and strong community feel. A wide range of amenities are within easy reach, including a village shop, post office, pharmacy, pub, cafes, takeaway, chip shop, primary school, and nursery. The coastal path is just a short walk away, linking into the famous Ceredigion Coastal Path with miles of spectacular walks and sea views.
