About The Property

Looking for a substantial, highly energy-efficient detached house with flexible bedroom space, landscaped gardens, far-reaching views and a great Newport setting close to Cardigan Bay? This smart and well-kept home offers four double bedrooms plus a useful office, a spacious kitchen/diner running the full depth of the house, ground floor bedroom facilities, underfloor heating downstairs and driveway parking for around three vehicles in a very appealing part of West Wales.

Set on a corner plot in Newport, this well-presented detached house offers a very good mix of practical family space, flexible accommodation and a smart modern finish. The setting is a strong part of the appeal, with far-reaching views, and a professionally landscaped garden that gives the outside space real style as well as usability. It is the sort of house that feels well thought through, with a layout that could suit family life, visiting guests, home working or multi-generational living.

The approach is neat and straightforward, with a tarmac driveway to the front, shrub borders and a canopied entrance with ramped access leading into the main hallway. From the outset, the house has a clean, well-kept feel, and the entrance hall sets the tone nicely with a bright finish, stairs rising to the first floor, an understairs storage cupboard and doors leading off to the main ground floor rooms.

The lounge sits to the front of the house and is a really comfortable reception room, with good proportions and wide windows fitted with shutters. It feels settled and welcoming rather than formal, making it an easy everyday living space and a useful room to have separate from the kitchen area.

Also off the hallway is the cloakroom/WC, fitted with WC and wash hand basin, which is always useful in a family house or when entertaining.

Continued:

One of the strongest features on the ground floor is bedroom one. This is a double room with built-in wardrobes and doors opening directly out to the garden, which gives it a really appealing connection to the outside space. It would work well as a main bedroom, guest room or ground floor room for anyone wanting to reduce stair use. The en-suite is fitted with a WC, wash hand basin, double shower and heated towel rail, making this part of the house especially practical.

Running along the side of the property, the kitchen/diner is a very good everyday space and, in my view, one of the main selling points here. It is more than just a kitchen, with room for cooking, dining and sitting, so it works as the natural hub of the house. There is a range of base and wall units, a one-and-a-half sink and drainer, eye-level electric oven and grill, built-in dishwasher, space for a fridge freezer, high-quality Karndean flooring (which is throughout the ground floor) and a breakfast bar that helps define the layout without breaking up the room. There is also a seating area, which makes this feel sociable and practical in equal measure. Double glazed doors open out to the garden, helping the room connect well with the outside areas.

Leading off the kitchen is the utility room, fitted with a stainless steel sink and drainer, further base and wall units, space for a washing machine and tumble dryer, and housing the gas boiler. It is exactly the sort of room that makes day-to-day living easier, keeping laundry and household jobs out of the main kitchen space.

On the first floor, the landing gives access to the remaining rooms and includes a useful storage cupboard, there is also a boarded loft space with its pull-down ladder, which spans the length of the whole house and which offers extensive storage. The layout upstairs works well, with three further double bedrooms, a family bathroom and an office that could also be used in different ways depending on requirements.

Bedroom four is a double room with built-in wardrobes, while bedroom three is another double. Bedroom two is currently arranged as a library/music room, and it is a lovely example of how flexible the accommodation is. It has the proportions for a proper bedroom, but also works very well as a second sitting room, reading room or hobby space. That flexibility is something buyers tend to value, especially when houses need to adapt over time.

The office is another useful room and has a T-shaped layout with access to under-eaves storage. It would suit home working well, but could equally be used as an occasional guest space or perhaps a hobby room. That extra room makes a real difference, especially for anyone wanting a degree of separation between work and home life.

The family bathroom serves the first floor bedrooms and is fitted with a bath with shower over, WC and wash hand basin. It is a practical arrangement for a house of this size, with the added benefit of the ground floor en-suite and cloakroom helping the overall balance of facilities.

Outside, the gardens have clearly had a lot of thought put into them. Rather than feeling like an afterthought, they are properly designed and very much part of the overall appeal. The raised beds, structured planting and paved seating areas create an outdoor space that looks smart and is easy to enjoy. The images show a garden that has been professionally landscaped, giving it shape, colour and interest without becoming high maintenance. It is a much more polished outside space than many modern homes offer, and it suits the house very well.

Newport remains one of the most sought-after coastal towns in this part of West Wales, and it is easy to see why. There is a strong sense of place here, with a good mix of independent shops, places to eat, everyday amenities and easy access to the coast. Cardigan Bay is close at hand, with beaches, coastal walks and wider scenery that continue to draw buyers to the area. For those wanting a home that works well on a practical level but is also well placed for enjoying the surroundings, this is a very solid option.

Overall, this is a smart detached house with more versatility than first expected. The ground floor bedroom and en-suite add real practicality, the kitchen/diner is a strong central space, and the landscaped garden gives the whole property an extra level of finish. For anyone looking in Newport for a well-kept home with flexible accommodation, parking and a very good setting, this one deserves a closer look.
