About The Property

Looking for a character cottage in need of modernisation, with a garden that backs onto a stream, set in a convenient village location close to the Pembrokeshire coast? This semi-detached home in Felindre Farchog offers flexible living space, original features and plenty of scope to make it a comfortable home or coastal base in West Wales.

Set along the village road in Felindre Farchog, just a short drive from Newport and the coastline of Cardigan Bay, this semi-detached cottage has a straightforward layout with a mix of traditional features and practical living space. With no off-road parking and a shared side access, it suits those prioritising location, character and outdoor space over parking convenience.

The main entrance is via the back door through the shared access passageway into the garden, leading into the property. The kitchen sits to the rear of the house and is fitted with a range of wall and base units, offering good storage and worktop space. There is a freestanding electric cooker, sink and drainer, and wood-effect flooring which keeps the space practical. A cupboard provides additional storage, and double doors open through to the main living area, helping the ground floor feel more connected.

The lounge is a comfortable central space, with an open fireplace creating a natural focal point. There is room here for seating and dining if required, and the staircase rises from this room to the first floor. Doors lead out to the side and into the inner hallway, giving a nice flow between the different areas of the ground floor.

From the inner hallway, access is provided to the ground floor bedroom, bathroom and separate WC. The bedroom is a double, positioned on the ground floor, which adds flexibility for those needing single-level living. The bathroom includes a bath with an electric shower over and a wash hand basin, while the separate WC sits alongside, a practical arrangement.

Upstairs, the landing has some restricted head height, which is typical for a property of this style. There is useful storage here, including space for the hot water tank. Two further bedrooms are located on this floor. The second bedroom is a single, also with some restricted head height, and looks out over the rear garden. The third bedroom is a double, again with areas of reduced headroom, but benefits from exposed beams and built-in storage, including under-eaves space. Both upstairs rooms enjoy views over the garden, adding a pleasant outlook.

Outside, the rear garden is a real feature of the property. A patio area sits directly outside the house, providing a spot for seating or outdoor dining. Beyond this is a lawned section with raised beds, offering potential for gardening or growing produce. At the far end, a gateway leads down to a stream, which adds a natural backdrop and a sense of space beyond the boundary. There is also an old shed providing basic storage.

The setting in Felindre Farchog places the property within easy reach of Newport, with its mix of independent shops, eateries and access to the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park. The wider area of West Wales is known for its scenery, coastal walks and beaches along Cardigan Bay, making this an appealing option for those looking for a permanent home, second property or a project with potential.

Overall, this is a property with character and flexibility, offering a manageable footprint with scope to update and personalise over time. The garden and stream setting give it an edge, and the location close to the coast adds to its appeal.

Viewings are recommended to appreciate the layout, setting and potential on offer.
