About The Property

Looking for a low-maintenance coastal base with estuary views, off-road parking and more space than first meets the eye? This extended one-bedroom bungalow in St Dogmaels offers a practical layout, a sociable living space and outdoor areas that make the most of its corner plot setting in West Wales.

Set within the ever-popular village of St Dogmaels, just a short drive from Cardigan and the coastline of Cardigan Bay, this semi-detached bungalow is a great example of a home that offers more than expected from the outside. The extension has made a real difference here, creating a layout that flows well and gives a bit of flexibility depending on how the space is used.

The property is approached via a small cul-de-sac, with the benefit of off-road parking to both the front and side – something that's always a bonus in this sort of location. A door leads into the front porch, which works well as a practical buffer for coats, shoes and everyday bits.

From here, the main living space opens up into an open-plan lounge and kitchen. It's a comfortable and sociable area, with a good range of wall and base units, space for appliances and a window positioned to take in views down towards the Teifi Estuary. It's one of those small but important details that just lifts the space slightly beyond the everyday.

A door from the lounge leads through into the dining room, which feels like a useful addition thanks to the extension. There's built-in storage here as well, and enough room to create a separate dining or even a home working area if needed.

To the rear, a hallway connects through to the shower room and bedroom, with another handy built-in cupboard providing extra storage. The shower room is straightforward and modern, fitted with a shower, WC and wash hand basin.

The bedroom sits a couple of steps down, giving it a slightly more tucked-away feel. It's a comfortable double with its own built-in cupboard, and overall feels like a quiet space within the property.

Externally:

Outside is where this home really starts to show its full potential. Sitting on a corner plot, the garden wraps around the side and rear, offering a mix of usable and low-maintenance spaces. To the side, there's an enclosed garden area with astro turf and a garden shed, bordered by established hedging which gives a decent level of privacy.

Moving around to the rear, a raised decking area sits just outside the back door – easily one of the best spots here. It's a great place to sit out and take in the outlook towards the estuary, and feels like a natural extension of the living space in the warmer months.

There's also additional storage to the side of the property and a further shed, adding to the practicality.

Overall, this is a really solid option for anyone looking for something manageable, well-located and with just that bit of extra interest thanks to the extension and views. It would suit a range of buyers – from those looking for a coastal bolt-hole, to downsizers wanting to stay connected to St Dogmaels and the surrounding area.
