"As artists, light matters to us. I don't think we'll ever find anywhere with better natural light - the huge sash windows make morning coffees and afternoon wines a real treat. The building's been here since 1865, and there's something lovely about living with that much history. Most of us own our flats, so it's genuinely neighbourly - people say hello, look out for the place. And then you step outside and you're in the heart of Bristol, but somehow it still feels calm behind that front door."
