There's no agent like home

This stunning four-bedroom detached home, known as Station House, was originally built in 1884 and has been thoughtfully extended and redeveloped to blend period character with modern convenience.

Its location is exceptional: with hillside views, direct access onto the Longdendale Trail for countryside walks, and Hadfield train station just a short walk away providing direct commuter services into Manchester. Despite the convenience, the setting is peaceful and private, with no disturbance from passing trains. Local shops, schools, and village amenities are all close by.

The property offers an abundance of versatile living space, including a recently converted cellar, a professionally finished garage/studio, and a year-round conservatory. It's a rare opportunity to enjoy the best of both worlds: rural tranquillity combined with city links right on your doorstep.

Why Station House?

Station House offers far more than the average four- bedroom detached: a fully converted cellar, a high quality studio with its own entrance, a year-round conservatory, multiple utility spaces, and hillside views with direct access to beautiful walks. Combined with excellent commuter links into Manchester, it delivers the ideal mix of character, flexibility, and location.
