Two additional double bedrooms with built in storage, an attractive kitchen and versatile utility space make everyday living feel effortless.

Argyll House brings character and convenience together in a distinctive seafront setting. An ornate lift serves the building, while secure camera entry adds reassurance. Interior

A wonderful sense of space greets you from the moment you step inside this beautifully presented three-bedroom apartment. Positioned on the second floor, the home begins with a wide and welcoming hallway, providing a natural flow to each of the rooms beyond. The lounge is a particularly inviting space, currently arranged to accommodate both relaxing and dining. Folding doors open directly onto the balcony, allowing the room to connect effortlessly with its coastal surroundings. Open up the space on a warm day and let the sea breeze drift through the apartment, or step outside with a morning coffee and watch the ever-changing skies and ships moving across the water. It is a view that becomes part of everyday life rather than something reserved for weekends away. Thoughtfully designed for practicality, the kitchen is finished with white cabinetry and natural wood-toned work surfaces, creating a light and timeless feel. An integrated hob and oven, as well as integrated fridge and freezer keep the finish streamlined, while the cleverly incorporated breakfast bar and seating bench create an informal place for everything from a quick breakfast to conversation over a glass of wine. Just beyond, a separate utility area helps keep the practicalities of daily life neatly tucked away and includes an additional storage cupboard. The first bedroom is impressively proportioned, providing generous room for wardrobes and furniture without compromising its feeling of openness. Its greatest luxury, however, is direct access onto the balcony, as well as being able to wake in the morning and begin the day with peaceful views across the water, right from your bedroom window. The second bedroom is another generous double, complemented by two built-in wardrobe cupboards and a partial sea view, while the third is equally versatile. Currently arranged as a home office, it could just as comfortably become a child's bedroom, guest room or dedicated hobby space. Completing the accommodation is a bright, neutrally finished and fully tiled bathroom, fitted with both a bath and separate shower enclosure alongside a hand basin set within a useful vanity unit. A separate W/C sits conveniently adjacent. Having undergone a complete renovation by the current owner within the last five years, the apartment offers a home that feels considered, comfortable and ready to be enjoyed.

Exterior

Argyll House has a character all of its own, its distinctive Art Deco architecture giving the building an unmistakable presence beside the Westcliff seafront. Inside, one of its most charming features is the ornate lift serving the floors; still in operation after many years, it provides a wonderful reminder of the building's history while remaining an invaluable everyday convenience. A west facing balcony allows sun to track beautifully from the kitchen and bathroom in the morning, round to the lounge and balcony for golden afternoons and radiant sunsets that make reaching for the camera irresistible. Practicality has been carefully considered too. The apartment benefits from its own private garage, complete with electricity and a remote-controlled door, with enough space to securely park a car away from the elements. The garage is positioned within a private gated residents' car park, where further communal parking is available on a first come, first served basis. A secure camera entry system adds another reassuring touch, enabling residents to see and grant access to visitors without leaving the apartment, also available remotely via a mobile phone app. Together, the private garage, gated parking, lift and secure entrance create a particularly convenient arrangement, while the building and attractive grounds itself retains the charm and individuality that makes Argyll House such a recognisable part of the local seafront.

Location

Positioned directly beside Westcliff's coastline, Argyll House offers the kind of setting where the sea becomes part of everyday life. The beach and promenade are effectively on the doorstep, making spontaneous evening walks, quiet mornings beside the water and leisurely weekends along the coast wonderfully easy. The Cliffs Pavilion and picturesque Southend Cliff Gardens are also within the wider seafront area, the latter offering landscaped gardens alongside sweeping Thames Estuary views. For everyday amenities, Hamlet Court Road provides a popular collection of independent shops, retailers, cafés and local services, while nearby Shorefield Road offers established dining that many locals speak highly of. Westcliff Station is conveniently positioned for commuters, with direct c2c services towards London Fenchurch Street, creating an excellent connection between life beside the sea and the City. For further green space, Chalkwell Park is nearby, offering ornamental gardens, sports facilities, children's play areas and a café. It is a location that manages to feel relaxed and coastal while keeping transport, shopping, dining and recreation comfortably accessible.
