

33 Broadleaze, Down Ampney, Cirencester, GL7 5QX

Welcome to this three bedroom end of terrace home, originally built in the 1950's and held within the same family since approximately 1963. Now requiring full modernisation, this is an ideal project for first time buyers, investors or developers, offering excellent scope to refurbish, extend (subject to planning permission) and add significant value.

Property Description

Positioned on a generous end plot, this traditional post-war home offers well-balanced accommodation typical of the era, with clearly defined living spaces and excellent natural light. The ground floor currently comprises a sitting room to the rear and a kitchen to the front. Subject to redesign, there is strong potential to create an open-plan kitchen/dining/family space, which is highly desirable in today's market.

Upstairs, there are three bedrooms - two comfortable doubles and a further single bedroom - together with a family bathroom.

The property now requires updating throughout, including kitchen, and bathroom, but represents a blank canvas for buyers looking to modernise to their own specification.

Exterior

As an end of terrace, the house benefits from additional side access and a larger than average plot compared to mid-terrace equivalents. There is front garden space and an enclosed rear garden offering scope for landscaping and extension (subject to the necessary planning consents). The side plot may provide potential for a single or two-storey extension, again subject to planning permission and building regulations approval.

Garage & Parking

Driveway parking and wider than average single garage.

Area

Down Ampney is a highly regarded Cotswold village situated between Cirencester and Fairford, offering a peaceful rural setting whilst remaining conveniently accessible to surrounding market towns. The village is best known as the birthplace of composer Ralph Vaughan Williams and retains a strong sense of heritage, centred around the attractive village green and All Saints Down Ampney Church.

Everyday amenities include a well-supported village hall, cricket club and popular public house, creating a genuine community atmosphere. A wider range of facilities, supermarkets, cafés, schooling and leisure amenities can be found in nearby Cirencester, often referred to as the "Capital of the Cotswolds".

For commuters, the village offers straightforward access to the A417/A419, linking to Swindon and the M4, whilst Kemble Station provides mainline rail services to London Paddington. Down Ampney remains one of the area's most desirable villages – valued for its traditional Cotswold character, open countryside surroundings and balanced accessibility.
