The Property

Entry is to a wide central hall, where pale tiled flooring, full-height fitted storage and panelled detailing establish the apartment's refined yet functional tone. Cleverly integrated utility storage conceals laundry and household space behind bespoke cabinetry, while a separate guest WC has been finished with brass fittings, timber shelving and monochrome accents.

Beyond, the apartment opens into a generous open-plan living space arranged around large picture windows overlooking the communal gardens and tree canopy beyond. Timber-effect flooring runs throughout, lending warmth to the otherwise crisp architectural lines. The proportions comfortably accommodate distinct dining and seating areas, while the elevated outlook and abundant natural light give the room an airy quality throughout the day.

The kitchen is arranged in a clean L-shaped formation with glossy white cabinetry, integrated appliances and dark composite-style worktops. Under-cabinet lighting and minimal detailing reinforce the apartment's contemporary aesthetic.

The bedroom sits quietly to one side of the plan and is notably generous in scale, with space for a king-size bed and additional furniture. Soft neutral finishes and full-height glazing create a calm atmosphere, while bespoke fitted wardrobes and the adjoining dressing room provide excellent storage rarely found in apartments of this scale.

The bathroom has been thoughtfully finished with textured full-height tiling, brass fixtures and a combination of walk-in shower and full-size bath, offering a more substantial arrangement than is typical for a one-bedroom apartment.

The Outside

Central House is arranged around beautifully maintained communal gardens with wide pathways, mature planting and sheltered seating areas that soften the modern architecture of the development. The building itself has a distinctly contemporary appearance, with extensive glazing and clean horizontal lines giving it an almost boutique hotel character.

From the apartment's elevated fifth-floor position there are long green views across the surrounding landscape, creating an unexpected sense of openness and privacy.

Residents benefit from secure entry systems, well-maintained communal areas and the convenience of lift access.
